Supply in the Reservoir Declining Two Inches a Day.

Park distributing reservoir this morning The decrease in the supply will be as much if not more to-morrow. Hain fell to the extent of nearly one-fifth o an inch last night, but that made little difference in the city's water supply. The difficulty lies in the fact that the old aqueduct cannot supply the demand. Yesterday, for the full length of the Croton dam, 140 feet, a sheet of water five inches deep was running to waste. If this waste water could have been brought to this city there would be no talk of a water famine. The Central Park and all the reservoirs of the city would be filled to the brim and the city would be filled to the brim and water would be as free as bountiful Nature intended it to be.

As it is, the great demand occasioned by the hot weather is rapidly reducing the available supply and the resultant inconvenience of the people is very great.

With two inches less of water in the reservoir than there was yesterday, it is hardly necessary to say that there has been no improvement in the condition of things. Fire hydrands are dry, and hundreds of tenements are absolutely without a supply of water save during the hours of the night, when the steam pumps of the manufactories and the big buildings have given over their robbers of the mains.

A ray of hore illumines this dark prospect, however—the new aqueduct? Its completion is promised by the Aqueduct Commissioners by July 15, and a proper economy of our present supply of water natificated that time is all that is needed.

To this end Commissioner (tilroy has done all in his power to prevent a needless waste of water.
